

ABSTRACT

A method for evaluating, comparing and scoring designated pairs of responses to a series of questions that have been recorded directly by the examinee on a master answer sheet by darkening spaces corresponding to the selected answer. A template is placed over the master answer sheet and each of a series of designated responses are paired together and evaluated by following a path, as designated on the template, which joins each of the designated pairs of responses together and allows the responses to be visible through the template.